To the students of Cleveland High School—students raised in a beautiful and bountiful land, the Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors who travel from snow-covered mountains, across sparkling Clinch waters, and through cedar woodlands—to Cleveland High School, let us remember our walk together down the highway of learning to experiment, discovery and accomplishment.

And to the Seniors, let us look into the skyways of the future to a land of higher goals, better ideas, and greater opportunities.

In Appreciation . . .

Remembering your untiring effort to guide us in our search for higher ideals and the better things . . .

Remembering your guidance and wise counseling while sponsoring the activities of our school . . .

Remembering your interest in our accomplishments toward the goal we are all seeking . . .

Remembering your faith and understanding which gave us an inspiration to delve deeper into the intricate recesses of true knowledge . . .

Remembering your devotion to the cause of education which gave us the desire to seek refinement of character, good citizenship, and deeper understanding . . .

We, the Yearbook Staff of 1969, take great pride in displaying our loyalty to you, Mr. Omer Elkins, by dedicating this volume of The Arrow to you.

Every year since first coming to Cleveland High School, I have been asked to write a message for the yearbook. I am taking this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to those who made my short tenure here such an enjoyable one.

It has been my pleasure to see the curriculum expanded to further meet the needs of the students. Together we have experienced joy in victory and sadness in defeat in our athletic endeavors. In our academic pursuits we have broadened our horizons and have experienced significant growth. I am sure that the three years we have worked together have laid the foundation of experience that we can build upon in the years to come.

To those who are Seniors, I hope you can look upon your high school days as productive ones where the seeds of prosperity and happiness were sown. I challenge you to look to the future as an opportunity to use the experiences of the past as a building block to shape a better tomorrow.

All-Stars

This year brings to a close the high school basketball career of Jeff Owen, Virginia's All-Time Scoring Champion.

After starring for a year on the Indian's J.V. squad, Jeff was promoted to the varsity team where he quickly made his debut into the elite of high school athletes.

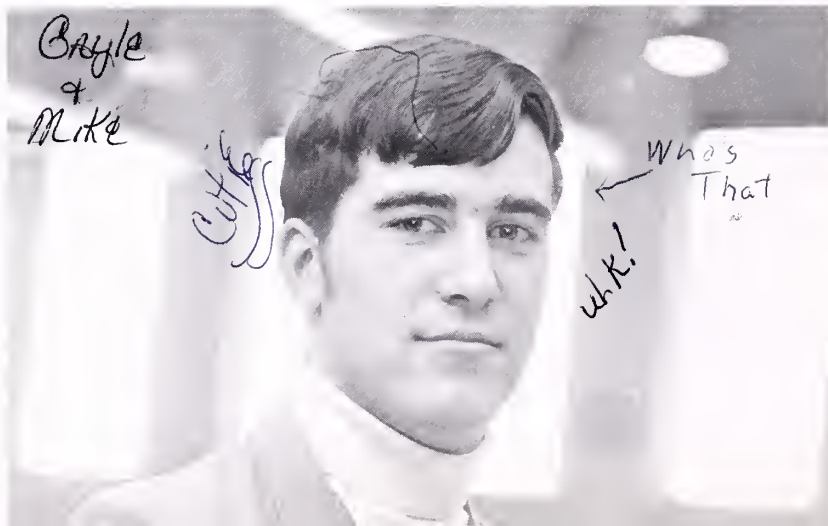

The following year, as a sophomore, Jeff won a position on the All-County, All-District, and All-Southwest Virginia teams, and was nominated recipient of the Russell County Sportsmanship Award.

Before the close of the 67-68 season, Jeff broke his way into the 1,000-point club and in February, the All-County, All-District, and All-Southwest Virginia Teams welcomed him back.

As Jeff moved into his final season, sportswriters and college scouts kept an eye on the man who might very well become Virginia's All-Time Career Scoring Champion. Before the season was over, averaging 30 points a game, Cleveland's scoring wizard edged past the 15-year record to become Virginia's All-Time Scoring Champion with a career total of 2,158 points.

We extend to Jeff a most hearty, "Congratulations!" and wish him much success as he enters a new era in his basketball career.

At last we've achieved our goal. We're Seniors! Our class has shared many happy memories . . . and many disappointments in our past twelve years together. Out of our graduating class of thirty-six, only eleven of us began together in the first grade. But we all feel as if we've known each other for years.

We can recall many changes: our school, our teachers, our activities, our interests—all have changed. But we have progressed steadily toward our goal.

When I was small I used

Tall men go by beneath

I used to hope, and even pray, every single night

That I would grow to be a man to run my fingers
on that line—
And now I can. But, heck
